Children and Youth Choir Symbol – Romania

Directors: Jean Lupu/Luminița Guțanu Stoian

Competing in Categories: A (Children's and Youth Choirs) and E (Sacred Music)

The “Symbol” Choir was founded on September 18th, 1990 by professor Jean Lupu, under the high patronage, and with the blessing of Patriarch Teoctist, the former Head of the Romanian Orthodox Church. All members of the choir are excellent musicians and good Christians, preserving and representing successfully Symbol’s unique voiceprint within the Romanian choral scene. "Symbol" has performed on the most prestigious scenes all over the country: the Palace Hall, the Radio Hall, the Romanian Athenaeum, the Opera House, the Music Academy, the Houses of Parliament, the Cotroceni Palace, as well as in various churches and cathedrals in Bucharest, and all over Romania. Moreover, a special importance should be given to the fact that the famous George Enesco Festival includes annually in its program at least one concert to be performed by "Symbol". The choir's discography is also extremely impressive and extensive, counting over 100 choral works recorded for the National Radio Station, in Kardex, 16 LP's (of which 4 CD's and 4 similar audio cassettes), other 16 CD's and also a video cassette ("The Angels' Voices", 1992), containing a shot made from several Symbol's performances at church services, recorded in different monasteries from around Bucharest. The choir's main conductor is PhD. Senior Lecturer, Luminița Guțanu Stoian born in Moldavia. It is also worth mentioning the fact that "Symbol" was twice in a row (2001, 2002) included on the list of nominees for the Romanian Music Awards, for its first 2 CD's, along with other famous Romanian artists and musicians such as Ion and Mădălin Voicu, Dan Iordăchescu and the "Madrigal" Choir.

p that is assembled mostly of capella singers. In some forms, klapa is accompanied with a guitar or some similar instrument. The origin of this type of singing comes from Dalmatia, southern part of Croatia: people used to enjoy their free time just by being together, talking and singing without instruments (mostly men). Later, it became part of a musical theory, rules have been regulated, so today klapa (male or female) is formed by 4 types of voices. Klapa Volosko was founded in 2001. The name "Volosko" comes from the small town Volosko, situated near Opatija. From the beginning, klapa Volosko is led by maestro Darko Majstorović. Klapa's programme consists of traditional chants and songs from the Kvarner and Istria regions, as well as from the Dalmatian area, but also presenting original compositions of Croatian composers of any generation. Those chants usually speak about the sea and the hard life of the fishermen, but also celebrate love, the homeland and joy of life. All chants are written in four-part sections – for soprano, mezzo-soprano, alto and second alto. The ten acapella female singers from klapa Volosko are sometimes accompanied by traditional musical instruments of this region, especially sopile – an istrian ancient traditional woodwind instrument similar to a modern oboe on which are played numerous chants written in characteristic istrian scale. So far, Klapa Volosko has given several concerts in Croatia and abroad (Italy, France, Austria, Hungary, Slovenia, Montenegro) and attended popular Croatian klapa festivals (Buzet, Omiš, Senj).
