oir with its base in Bruneck, South Tyrol, Italy. The choir started in 2003 as a project of the Music School, Bruneck with its members all voice students of the conductor Clara Sattler. The special name of this special male choir deserves to be explained briefly. “In the South Tyrolean dialect “BrummNet” stands for “Why not?” and was the dialectal answer of the choir’s director Clara Sattler to a request for a performance. “But “Brumm net” also means “don’t grumble” and reads like an announcement to the men in the choir to sing neatly, i.e. sonorously. From the beginning of the choir’s life a special focus of the ensemble was on sacred repertoire. BrummNet’s performances in sacred services is characterised by a heartfelt honesty and expressiveness serving the music and the people through their pure singing. It is not only sacred music that the choir is known for, but also the unique rendition of South Tyrolean and Alpine folk music. The choir received international attention with its classical program in October 2007 and November 2016 at the "Gesamtiroler Wertungssingen". In addition to the Audience Award, the jury awarded them the highest marks, thus expressing that BrummNet is among the finest that the South Tyrolean choir world currently has to offer. A competition and concert tour led the choir to the first Swiss Alpenchorfestival in Brigg (CH) in 2008 and to Austria Cantat in Feldkrich (A) in 2015. The Choir's discography consists of two CDs. The first one featuring South Tyrolean Advents music, and the second one is a portrait of the choir singing a mixed programme. The male singers come from a wide region in South Tyrol, and all from different professions, from bankers, teachers, farmers to architects and pensioners. The choir strives to serve choral music as an art and endeavors with each performance to give listeners a soundful and heartfelt experience through the medium of the sung voice. Currently the choir is conducted by Clara Sattler, assisted by Johann van der Sandt
